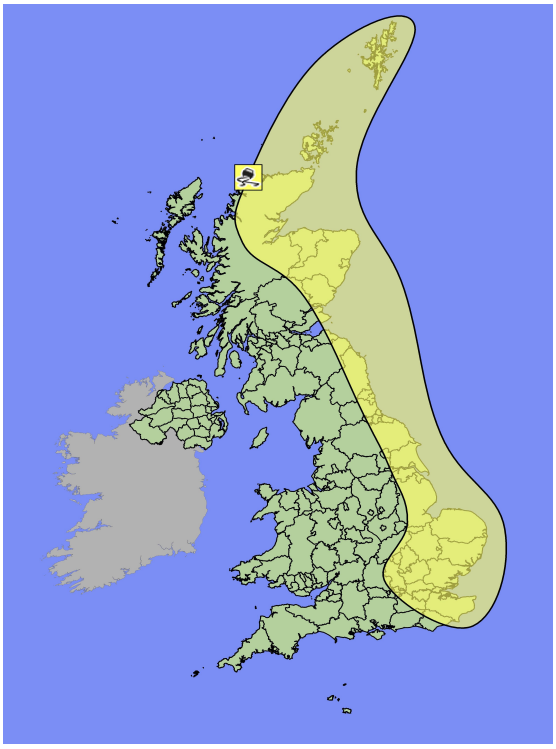
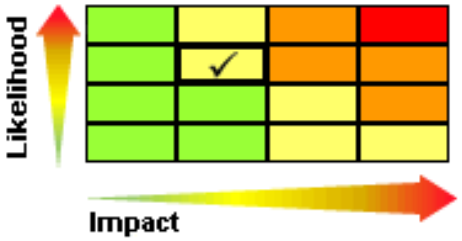
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Temperatures are expected to fall below freezing widely across the UK on Saturday evening. As a result, ice is likely to form where surfaces are left wet by showers, some of which will be wintry and are likely to continue overnight across some eastern counties. Outside of the yellow area there is an increased risk of icy patches even on roads that have been treated with salt, where water run-off/seepage resulting from recent wet weather may wash off any earlier salt treatment.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 17:00 on Sat, 01st Dec 2012 until 11:30 on Sun, 02nd Dec 2012

Following showers of rain, sleet and snow on Saturday, ice is expected to form on untreated surfaces on Saturday evening and persist well into Sunday morning. Further wintry showers are likely to affect eastern coastal counties through the night.

The public should be aware of possible disruption to travel.
